“Peri-Implantitis: A Man-Made Disease – Diagnosis, Prevention, and Management”

Peri-implantitis has emerged as a significant clinical challenge in implant dentistry, with its etiology often linked to preventable factors. This presentation delves into the critical role we play in the early diagnosis and management of peri-implantitis, emphasizing the importance of prevention through evidence-based maintenance protocols. Attendees will gain a comprehensive understanding of the disease’s pathogenesis, risk factors, and diagnostic criteria, along with practical strategies to mitigate its progression and ensure long-term implant success.

Dr Alen Rahulan

Dr Alen Rahulan completed his Bachelor of Dental Surgery degree from The University of Adelaide in 2013. After graduating Alen worked in private practice in Adelaide and overseas in Singapore.

Alen’s passion for Periodontics brought him back to Adelaide for a year of research on Azithromycin and periodontal disease. He eventually returned to his hometown Melbourne to complete his specialist Periodontics training at The University of Melbourne and was involved in research focused on assessing surgical techniques to maximise aesthetic outcomes of dental implants.
