Notice of ADAVB Inner Melbourne Group Meeting

Wednesday 19th August 2026

Implant overdentures in daily practice
Dr. Anny Huang (Prosthodontist)

Implant overdentures represent an important treatment option in contemporary prosthodontics, offering improved stability, retention, and function compared with conventional complete dentures. They provide a predictable and versatile approach for managing edentulous patients, particularly where anatomical limitations, patient expectations, or treatment considerations may make fixed implant rehabilitation less suitable. Successful outcomes rely on careful treatment planning, appropriate implant selection, prosthetic design, and long-term maintenance.

Dr. Anny Huang

Dr Anny Huang completed her dental degree at Griffith University and specialist training in Prosthodontics at the University of Melbourne. She subsequently undertook a Maxillofacial Prosthodontic Fellowship at the Chris O'Brien Lifehouse, where she was involved in the rehabilitation of patients with complex maxillofacial defects.

Her clinical interests include aesthetic dentistry, implant prosthodontics, removable prosthodontics, and the management of patients with anatomical, surgical, and implant-related challenges. She integrates digital workflows with conventional prosthodontic principles to develop practical, patient-centred treatment solutions.
